Fighting in Adam's Old Home.

Savannah News.

Not a great deal of attention has been paid the brief announcement in a dispatch from Cairo, Egypt, that British forces have captured the city of Beers, not far from the mouths of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, and yet it was in that vicinity that according to popular belief Adam and Eve were created and spent happy days until they ate the forbidden fruit. No spot on earth is so holy, so sacred, so venerated because of those who once lived there that it will not be used as a battlefield if the strategy of generals makes it useful. The Holy Land has frequently been spotted with blood and there is no certainty that this greatest of all wars will not make its hills and valleys red again.

But think of a battle in the Garden of Eden! If the old snake is there yet, the one that tempted Eve to eat of the famous apple, he will likely see a great many things that will give him intense pleasure if men by the thousands begin to kill each other there. And unless he is in possession to rifle and shrapnel fire he will do well to go into secure hiding when the guns begin to speak. How he would gleam, from a safe place, over the mad charges of infantry in the face of machine guns and say to himself that he did a good day's work when he showed Eve how luscious was the apple, and tempted her to eat and to give Adam a bit of it.

Man's earliest ancestral home is chiefly noted now for its oil refineries, but the ugliness of petroleum cannot rob the old place of its legendary eminence in the history of the race. The story is told that it was from among the roots of a date palm at old Beers that the Creator took the clay with which he fashioned the first man, the common ancestor according to widely held belief of all the various races that are so actively engaged in decimating each other. In the opinion of some persons race differences are at the bottom of the causes of the war, a fact that lends added interest to the reported capture of the home of the man from whom has descended Comstock and Usher, Highlander, Serbian and Frenchman, Spahi and Turco.

While his grandchildren are fighting so fiercely old Adam must be continually turning over in his grave, unless he has by now become accustomed to their bloody quarrels. It may cause him to make one more turn, however if he knows that lead is being sprayed all over the spot where he passed his boyhood, the happy days when he did not have to work for his living, before he was told, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread."

Contract Law Unconstitutional.

The United States Supreme Court has declared unconstitutional the Alabama law which permitted a person convicted of an offense of minor character to appear in court with others, confess judgment, and agree to work for individuals until all money paid in fees and costs had been returned in labor. Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C. —Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good.

I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it."

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlastingly tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.

THE REAL ESTATE SITUATION

JANUARY 18th, 1915

Inquiries are constantly coming to us in person and by mail asking our opinion as to the present industrial outlook, especially as regards investment in real estate at the present time. We take this method of replying.

Last August the heave of the mighty European tidal wave swung our country far out of its orbit, commercially, and for several months it was hard to tell how long it would be for the process of re-adjustment to begin.

The passing of December with a trade balance of nearly one hundred million dollars in favor of our country, and practically completing the liquidation of our floating foreign indebtedness was the turning of the tide. Our country is now well on the way towards recovery. We do not mean to say that we expect any pyrotechnical display, with a boom, boom, boom, and things generally sky-rocketing, but we believe the big business men of our country are right when they say we have passed the crisis, that the trend is now upward, that trade is improving, confidence is increasing, and that by fall a material increase in values all around may be expected. This view is fully sustained by facts. Factors are starting up, railroads are in the market again, idle men are going back to work, while nearly all farm products, except cotton, are high. Perhaps cotton furnishes at the present time however, the best index of all as to the future, the price now being higher than it has been since the outbreak of the European war, while the price for fall delivery is above 8 cents, middling basis. This indicates what the trade expects.

While the general situation will doubtless remain more or less abnormal until the war closes, we know that as long as it lasts Europe will have to buy more and more of our products,—we must feed and otherwise supply them to a certain extent.

After the war closes, our country, with its pent up energies released, with new markets, new connections and realignments, will move steadily forward, with our entire national life quickened and re-invigorated by the lessons learned in economy and thrift.

We say in conclusion, the time to buy property at far less than its value is rapidly passing. Already much property placed in our hands early last fall for sacrifice sale, has been withdrawn. We still have several farms around Dothan, and some propositions in Dothan real estate that we can sell at far less than its value. We can't go into details on such matters,—you will have to see us. Now is the time to get you a home, farm, or other property, either for speculation or permanent investment. Many people have been waiting for years for just this opportunity and now that it has come for a brief period, some will still defer the matter until the opportunity no longer exists. Others will act promptly and later on be referred to as "lucky."

There are our sentiments; we confidently expect the future to confirm our views. In the re-awakening that is beginning, we expect to keep Dothan and Newton county right at the front, and the investment demand from outside sources is now on the increase.

Come to see us at our office in the First National Bank Building. Talk the situation over with us. Let us know if we can serve you.

Dinner for Governor and Mrs. Henderson

Mrs. Ella Henderson Brock entertained at a beautiful dinner this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her home on Mildred street, when her guests included the members of the Henderson family. The table was spread with a hand made cloth of linen damask and in the center was a gorgeous pot of roses surrounded by amaranth bouquets and lilies of the valley. Course were laid for twelve and a delicious ten course dinner was served. At each place was a small picture of Charles Henderson in a silver picture frame, which each guest will preserve as a memento of the occasion. A beautiful silver loving cup was presented to Governor Charles Henderson bearing this inscription: "Presented to Charles Henderson by his loving brothers and sisters on the day of his inauguration as governor of the State of Mississippi, Jan. 18, 1915." On the table was inscribed the names of the brothers and sisters.

Fox Henderson, Ella Henderson Brock, J. C. Henderson, J. E. Henderson, Julia Henderson Weeden gathered around the festive board were Governor and Mrs. Charles Henderson, Dr. and Mrs. Hamilton of Troy, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Henderson of Troy, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Henderson, Mr. Clem Henderson Jr. of Dothan, Miss Ida Montgomery of Raleigh, N. C., Mrs. Ella Henderson Brock and Miss Nell Brock Montgomery Journal.

At the inaugural ball on Monday evening, Miss Beva Henderson of Dothan was an admired guest, wearing a dancing frock of pink charmeuse and lace, and carried pink Killarney roses.

Many Women Famous as Warriors

New York.—Some men laugh at when Lady Cook of London, directly after the outbreak of the European war proposed to raise an army of women soldiers. Prostitutes which might well have been given a less free rein hitherto, are more restrained, however now that news comes by rumpled to them in the government cable that a considerable number of wounded women are returning from the Russian battle lines. Col. Toudhinsky's daughter who in a man's uniform distinguished herself as a scout leader on the Angustavo front, carries three bullets in her body.

Many Noted Women Warriors

The pages of history bear the names of many noted women warriors of the so-called weaker sex.

Civilizing Cherry

Her Debut as a Dancer

The little unknown dancer was famous. Cherry had made her first appearance the night before. A few of the club members, and a few of the dancing girls, had been completely concealed her identity. She had seen Ned in a box to cut him out of the flowers she tossed to the audience. And he was waiting for it tonight!

You'd better take Cherry to hear the new violinist tonight, suggested Aunt Rose to him tonight. Before Cherry could offer an excuse, Ned rushed out and said, "I'm sorry, but I've an engagement." Aunt Rose's eyes were mischievous as she answered, "Yes, I'll be your man. I'll be on telephone to the theatre when the new violinist has made such a sensation and you will just might see Cherry in her new role, but her head was in a whirl.

Of course it couldn't be true that she had won his admiration! Cherry told herself this severely over and over again as she recalled the numberless rich and pretty girls who welcomed his company. It can't be true, she repeated as she stepped before the footlights. But her eyes quickly sought the box where he had sat. And he was there again! A thrill of triumph that is not exactly happiness ran through her—and then a little chill of disappointment.

After all it could only be the lights, the music and the girls that attracted him. For he had paid small heed to her at home, where the other men had been so attentive. Still the world was very beautiful and he was there, wearing her flower! She did not know that his keen eyes had recognized her instantly, and that he was there to watch and guard her from harm.
